POPPING CORN.

There they sat a popping corn.
John Stiles and Susan Cutter!
John Stiles was stout as any ox,
And Susan fat as butter.

And there they sat and shelled the corn,
And raked and stirred the fire,
And talked of different kind of ears,
And hatched their chairs up higher.

Then Susan she the popper shook,
And John he shook the popper,
Till both their faces grew as red,
As saucupans made of butter.

And then they shelled and popped and ate,
All kinds of fun a poking,
And he haw-hawed at her remarks,
And she laughed at his joking.

And still they popped, and still they ate,
(John's mouth was like a popper),
And stirred the fire, and sprinkled salt,
And shook and shook the popper.

The clock struck nine, the clock struck ten,
It struck eleven and then struck twelve,
And still no sign of stopping.

And John he ate, and Sue she thought—
The corn did pop and patter,
Till John cried out, "the corn's a-fire!
Why, Susan, what's the matter?"

Says she, "John Stiles, it's one o'clock;
You'll die of indigestion;
I'm sick of all this popping corn—
Why don't you pop the question?"

SKATING.

There is a little foot,
That I know of somewhere;
I wish I were the ice,
That I might freeze it there.

There is a little hand
In which carresses linger;
And if I were Jack Frost
I think I'd pinch a finger.

There is a music mouth
Where crimson blushes mingle;
I wish I were the cold,
To bite them into tingle.

There is a pair of eyes,
O'erhung with tresses golden;
I wish I were the veil,
To be so near beholden.

There is an angel face
Within an angel bonnet;
I wish I were a snow storm,
To melt by flakes upon it.

There is a little heart
My heart throbs at each minute;
And I would give the world
To win it—only win it.

There is a little girl
Skates somewhere hereabouts;
And if I were her skate,
I never would wear out.

From the Land We Love.
Sketch of the First Kentucky Brigade.

BY GEN. GEORGE B. HODGE.

Few men indeed, with means so limited, and in the midst of movements so grand and stupendous that the career of general officers have been lost sight of, have won such a name and reputation. Of a mild and unassuming demeanor, gentle and affable in his manners, handsome in person, and possessed of all that polish of address which is supposed to best qualify men for the drawing room and parlor, no enterprise however dangerous, no reconnaissance however tiresome and weary could daunt his spirits or deter him from his purpose. For months, with a handful of men, he swept the northern bank of Green River, cutting off the supplies of the enemy, destroying bridges necessary for their transportation, capturing their pickets, and harassing their flanks, moving with a celerity which defied pursuit. No commander of a detached post or guard of the enemy could flatter himself that distance from Bowling Green or disagreeableness of weather could protect him from a visit from Morgan. He was liable to be called upon at any hour, in any weather, or at any point, beyond the entrenched camps of the Federal army. The earth might be soaked with the rain, which had for days been falling, the roads might be impassable, the Green and Barren Rivers with their tributaries might be swollen far beyond their banks, but over that earth, and across those rivers, when least expected, came Morgan as with the swoop of an eagle, and after destroying the munitions of the enemy, or capturing the guards, was away again, leaving behind him a polite note intimating he would call again soon, or perhaps telegraphing a dispatch to the nearest Federal commander, giving him full and precise particulars of the movements he had just made, and most provoking details of the damage he had just committed. Long after the Confederate army had retired from Kentucky, when the entire State was in undisputed possession of the Northern armies, many a Southern sympathizer found immunity and protection from maltreatment and outrage by the significant threat that Morgan would visit that neighborhood soon; and indeed during the disastrous retreat from Nashville, the tireless partisan passing through eastern Tennessee and Kentucky far in the rear of the Federal army, left upon their train at Gallatin, Tennessee, and lit 'up the' spirits of the Tennesseans by one of his bold and daring strokes. Even when the Southern army had passed the Tennessee River, when every available soldier of the South was supposed to be at Corinth to meet the overwhelming hosts of the invader, Morgan gathering three or four hundred of his men re-crossed the River, fell upon the railroad train, at Athens, Alabama, captured two hundred and eighty prisoners and destroyed the cars. Ambushed, defeated, cut to pieces and routed by greatly superior forces a few days afterwards, hardly had the news reached Louisville of his disaster, when collecting two hundred of his scattered command, he fell like a thunderbolt upon the railroad train at Cave City, in the center of Kentucky, captured many prisoners, thousands of dollars in money, and destroying forty-three baggage cars laden with the enemy's stores.

Early in November, 1861, the Hon. John C. Breckinridge arrived at Bowling Green, when he resigned his seat as Senator from Kentucky, in the Federal Congress, and was immediately commissioned as Brigadier General and assigned to the command of the Kentucky Brigade, General Buckner assuming command of a division of which the Kentucky brigade was a component part. He assumed command on the 16th of November. Having as his Chief of Staff and A. A. General, Captain George B. Hodge and Aid-de-Camp Thomas T. Hawkin. The brigade was ordered to Oakland Station on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, where, in connection with Hindman's brigade, it remained in observation of the movements of the enemy on the North Bank of the Green River, who was known to be in great force at Munfordsville, and his cantonments extending back towards Elizabethtown, and was supposed to be only waiting the completion of the Green River bridge, which was repairing, to advance his entire column, estimated at 80,000 men, on Bowling Green and Nashville. Behind the curtain of the brigades of Hindman and Breckinridge, General Johnston was rapidly pushing on the fortifications at Bowling Green, and by the latter part of January, 1862, they had become quite formidable.

It had, however, become doubtful whether the enemy would attempt the passage of the Green River. It was certain if he did so, his true attack would be developed in a flank movement, by way of Glasgow and Scottsville on Nashville, while there was left him the alternative of massing his troops at Paducah, then in his possession, and availing himself of his enormous supplies of water transportation, of moving by the Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers on Fort Henry and Donelson, by a successful attack on those works, turning the flank of the Confederate forces at Bowling Green, opening the way to Nashville, and possibly enabling him to interpose between the Southern armies and their base of operations. To guard against this latter movement, the divisions of Generals Floyd and Pillow and a portion of the division of General Buckner, were about the 20th of January, moved by way of Clarksville, to the support of Donelson. With this force marched the 2nd Kentucky regiment, which, after covering itself with imperishable glory in the terrible combat of three days, at Fort Donelson, was on the 16th of February, surrendered to the enemy, and passed into captivity, ceased to participate in the campaign of the Spring and summer of 1862.

By the 10th of February, definite information had been obtained, by General Johnston, of the movements of the enemy. He was convinced that an overpowering force had moved upon Forts Donelson and Henry; that a heavy column was pursuing Crittenden, after defeating him, at Fishing Creek, threatening Nashville on that flank, and that a force almost as large as the Confederate force at Bowling Green was held in hand by the enemy to be poured across Green River and attack him in front, while the two bodies on his right and left united at Nashville and closed up his rear. With the promptness and decision which characterized his high and serenely courageous mind, Gen. Johnston determined to retire from Bowling Green and fall back on Nashville, where, uniting with the garrison and troops in defence of Forts Donelson and Henry, should these places be found to be untenable, he could hold the division of the Federal General Grant in check, while he went to the assistance of Crittenden, and crushed the Federal column advancing by way of Cumberland Gap. The fortifications of Bowling Green were with every expedition dismantled, the government stores shipped as rapidly as possible to Nashville, and on the 9th of February, an order was issued by Major General Hardee, commanding the central army of Kentucky, directing Gen. Hindman and Breckinridge to re-pass the Karren River and be in Bowling Green by the night of the 10th. The admirable discipline which General Breckinridge had exercised enabled him to comply promptly with the order, without confusion and with no loss of stores, equipments, or supplies. His brigade marching at 8 o'clock A. M., on the 10th passed Barren River bridge at 3 P. M., and bivouacked three miles south of Bowling Green for the night. Hindman being farther in the rear, lost a few of his scouts and had hardly time to blow up the bridges over Barren River when the head of the enemy's column came into sight and immediately commenced shelling the Railroad depot and that portion of the track on which were lying the freight trains. These they succeeded in firing finally.

When the retreat of the army commenced, Breckinridge's brigade was constituted the rear guard, General Hardee however, being still in rear with the cavalry and light artillery. Notwithstanding the fact that cold, freezing and intensely inclement weather set in, notwithstanding the fact that evidences of the demoralization which a retreat in the presence of an enemy always produces, were too apparent in many divisions of the army, yet the soldierly manner in which Breckinridge brought off his brigade, losing not a straggler from the ranks, not a musket or a tent, speaks more creditably for him, and for them than the recital perhaps of their deeds of daring in the field could do.

TO BE CONTINUED.

HEADQUARTERS MIL. DIV. OF THE MISSISSIPPI, BIG SAUNTY, GA., JUNE 21, 1864.

General S. G. Barbridge, Commanding District of Kentucky;

GENERAL: The recent raid of Morgan, and the concurrent acts of men styling themselves "Confederate partisans," or "guerrillas," call for determined action on your part. Even on the Southern "States rights" theory, Kentucky has not seceded. Her people, by their vote and by their actions, have adhered to their allegiance to the National Government; and the South would now coerce her out of our Union and into theirs—the very dogma of coercion upon which so much stress was laid at the outset of the war, and which carried into rebellion the middle or border States.

But politics aside, these acts of the so-called "partisans" or "guerrillas" are nothing but simple murder, base stealing, arson, and other well-defined crimes, which do not sound so well under their true names, as the more agreeable ones of warlike meaning. Now, before starting on this campaign, I foresaw, as you remember, that this very case would arise, I asked Governor Bramlette to at once organize in every county a small trustworthy band, under the sheriff, if possible, and at once dash to arrest every man in the community who was dangerous to it, and also every fellow hanging about the towns, villages, and cross-roads, who had no honest calling (the material out of which guerrillas are made). But this sweeping exhibition of power, doubtless, seemed to the Governor rather arbitrary.

The fact is, in our country personal liberty has been so well secured that public safety is lost sight of in our laws and constitutions, and the result is we are thrown back a hundred years in civilization, law, and everything else, and will go right straight to anarchy and the devil if somebody don't arrest our downward progress. We, the military, must do it, and we have right and law on our side. All governments and communities have a right to guard against real or even supposed danger. The whole people of Kentucky must not be kept in a state of suspense and danger lest a few innocent men should be wrongfully accused.

First—You may order all your post, district, and other commanders; that guerrillas are not soldiers, but wild beasts, unknown to the usages of war. To be recognized as soldiers, they must be enlisted, enrolled, officered, uniformed, armed and equipped by some recognized beligerent power, and must, if detached from a main army, be of sufficient strength, with written orders from some army commander, to do some military thing.

Of course we have recognized the Confederate Government as a beligerent power, but we deny their right to our lands, territories, rivers, coasts, and nationality; admitting their rebellion and the right to move to some other country, where lands and customs are more in accordance with their own ideas and prejudices.

Second—The civil power being insufficient to protect life and property, ex necessitate rei to prevent anarchy, "which nature abhors," the military steps in, and is rightful, constitutional, and lawful.

Under this law everybody can be made to "stay at home and mind his own business," and if they won't do that, can be sent away where they won't keep their honest neighbors in fear of danger, robbery, and insult.

Third—Your military commanders, provost marshals, and other agents, may arrest all males and females who have encouraged or harbored guerrillas or robbers, and you may cause them to be collected in Louisville, and when you have enough, say three or four hundred, I will cause them to be sent down the Mississippi, through the guerrilla gauntlet, and by a sailing ship send them to a land where they may take their niggers and make a colony, with laws and a future of their own. If they won't live in peace in such a garden as Kentucky, why then we will kindly send them to another, it would be a better land, and surely this would be kindness and a blessing to Kentucky.

I wish you to be careful that no personalities are mixed up in this, nor does a full and generous love of country, "of the South," of their State or county, form a cause for banishment; but that devilish spirit which will not be satisfied, and that makes war the pretext for murder, arson, and theft in all its grades, perjury and all the crimes of human nature.

I use no concealment in saying that I do not object to men and women having what they call "Southern feelings," if confined to love of country and of peace, honor, and security, and even of little family pride; but these become "crime" when enlarged to mean a love of war, desolation, famine, and all the horrid attendants of anarchy.

I am, with respect, General, your friend,

W. T. SHERMAN,
Maj. Gen. Com.

Noah and his happy family, so it is legended, were sailing along securely over the deluged world, when the Patriarch descried the last man. The latter had climbed to the summit of the highest tree, on top of the highest mountain in the world; the water was even then up to his chin, and still rising steadily as the torrents of rain descended. "Take me on board your raft, old man," sung out the last victim in a supplicating voice. "It can't be done, my dear fellow," was the patriarchal response. "None but the Lord's chosen people can board this craft." "Then go to thunder!" was the heroic response. "It's only going to be a small shower after all!" And then the last billow of the deluge rolled over the head of the gritty last man.

Since half a hundred people were burned to death in a railroad car the papers have suggested that the cars be heated with boiling water or steam. In case of a collision they would then be only scalded to death and not charred as the Angola victims were.

The New Yorker who told Thackeray that although he had no objection to England, he'd be afraid to go out at night there "for fear he should step off" is paralleled by the Yankee traveling in Europe who, when asked if he had crossed the Alps, replied "now you remind me of it, I believe I did pass some rising ground."

Death, hell and the grave you may escape; but I'll bet you four dollars that you have to buy your wife a new bonnet when she wants it.

"I am on the trail of a deer," as a gentleman said when he trod on a lady's dress.

"Oh, what a soft seat!" as the hat said when placed upon a dandy's head.

THE CYNTHIANA NEWS

CYNTHIANA, KY.

THURSDAY, Jan. 9, 1868.

A. J. MOREY, Editor.

Cynthiana—A Plea for its Churches.

There is probably no more reliable index to the cultivated public spirit, and the social and aesthetic culture and refinement, not to say piety, of a people, than the style and quality of its churches. A dilapidated, untasteful, uncomfortable house of worship, plainly evinces a want of taste and enterprising liberality, as well as religious zeal on the part of the congregation to whom it belongs, while a neat, attractive and comfortable church edifice evinces a liberal, cultivated, zealous congregation. It is a matter of common observation that all classes of public buildings and even the private residences of a community, accurately reflect the character of its citizens, and especially is this the case in regard to churches. A cultivated public spirit and love for the beautiful, no less than the instinct of their devotion manifest themselves in the erection and tasteful adornment of buildings set apart for the worship of God. It is true, that here, as everywhere, extremes meet and that costly and imposing churches, splendid cathedrals and temples, may be monuments of nothing more than superstition and unwelcome pride. But it is none the less true that ungainly, rickety, unkempt "meeting houses," such as three or four in Cynthiana, betoken the absence of any kind of pride, and the languor and decay of genuine devotion. We are disposed to believe that peculiar causes have operated to produce the sad neglect of its churches, by the people of Cynthiana; it may be indirectly one of the sad effects of the war. But there is no excuse now for allowing such a state of things to continue. It is a slander to the religious sentiment, the education and the public spirit of our citizens to longer tolerate the miserable eye-sores in the midst of us, bearing the name of churches. And this is a matter which concerns not only particular congregations of professing Christians, but the community at large, for the public generally are directly interested in whatever tends to promote the welfare and advancement of religion. There is no town of equal size with Cynthiana that we have seen in the State, that is so disgraced by outlandish, broken-down churches; none where the Sabbath is so poorly observed, and the public exercises of religion so poorly attended. The latter evil, we believe, is to some extent the result of the former. Fellow-citizens, these things ought not to be so. Let us pull down our churches and build better ones, or let us at least renovate and improve those we have; and then let us fill them with respectable and attentive congregations. We are persuaded the taste is here, the wealth is here, and the disposition we trust is here to remedy this grievance.

The Black Man's Opinion.

Not long since, a large and stalwart Ethiopian, as black as any of his ancestors of Africa, with a broad, large forehead, and a face indicative of goodness, entered the office of the county clerk of this county. As he entered the office, he took off his hat, and addressing himself to Mr. Wherrett, desired to know if there was a law compelling colored people to marry legally, and why it was that such a law was made. Mr. W. told him that the Legislature of the State had made such a law, and that it was for the purpose of giving his people the right to inherit property. He then desired to know how much it cost to take out a marriage license, and if the government received the money. Mr. W. feeling a little anxious as to the cause for such enquiries on the part of the colored man, requested him to give his reasons for them.

The black man said that before the war had begun which desolated this country, that he was happily situated in life, with old master—that he had plenty to eat and plenty to wear—that whenever he was sick, his master called in the doctor as quick for him as he would for one of his own children—that his work was not hard, in fact that he lived an easy and comfortable life—that he was happy, and his wife was happy, and his children were well fed and clothed, and to tell you the truth Mr. W., I didn't want to be differently or better fixed up in life than I was there; but now how different. I have no home for my wife and children, and do not know half the time where I shall be able to get bread to feed them. My work is ten times as hard now as then, and true I am paid for it, but when I buy clothing for my family and pay all the expenses at the end of the month I have not a cent left, and I am very unhappy. No, I am opposed to this government, Mr. W., and they shan't have any of my money. The abolitionists didn't free me and all our people because they loved us, but because they hated the slaveholder, and now that we are free, I fear that it will be but a short time before they will begin to drive us out of the country, as they did the poor Indians, and destroy us, as they are destroying the poor Indians in the far West. I believe the black man, in this country is doomed, and will be destroyed, because he listens to his enemies and not to his friends. I go to my old master for advice, and I know he is my friend, because he has never given me bad advice—because when I follow his advice I do well and am happier. He only wished that he and his people could have been left alone with their masters—then they had real enjoyment and some satisfaction. His talk created quite an excitement, and was listened to attentively. It is our opinion that he has told some truths, especially the one with reference to the love which the abolitionists pretend to have for his race—that he was free because of the hatred which was borne for the slaveholder and not for any love which the abolitionists had for his people.

National Democratic Convention

It has been suggested to us, and we think correctly too, that the Hon. J. B. Beck, of the Lexington District, should be appointed a delegate for the State at large, to the National Democratic Convention. He has the confidence of the people of Kentucky, and he is worthy of it, for his faithfulness to principle and eminent abilities.

Gen. Desha, of this county, would make, on account of his determined adherence to principle, and good qualities of mind, a faithful delegate to represent this district in the National Convention.

When the State Convention closes its labors, we hope to see the names of these gentlemen, among the list of delegates to the National Convention.

Candidates.

It will be seen by a notice in another column, that Dr. A. J. Beale, is a candidate for Clerk of the Circuit Court for the county of Harrison. The doctor is qualified and capable for the place, and has always been and now is, a firm and unflinching adherent to Democracy. Few men of our acquaintance have sacrificed as much of their time and money for principles, as the doctor, and his claims should be taken into consideration by his party.

The Steamer Richmond.

This low pressure steamer will leave Louisville for New Orleans, on Monday, January 13, 1868.

Within the last few years great improvement has been made in Western steamboats. A demand for a change for the better was necessary. Men of genius have thought of nothing but the annihilation of time, and extraordinary speed, in travel. In that direction they have gone far enough, and in our opinion, quite too far already, for the security of life and property. In their eager strife for gaining the greatest speed, the fortune and life of every individual who was unlucky enough to fall into their nets, was jeopardized and the sorrow trouble and disappointment which has been suffered by humanity from steamboat disasters on the great Mississippi, is sufficient, could we see them all as they occurred, to appall the hardest of hearts. It has been said by some one, that if we could see all the sorrow and grief which falls to the lot of humanity, in one day, that no face, however light the heart might be, could ever be wreathed in smiles again. Such would be the feelings of humanity could they see the horrid disasters that have occurred on our Western rivers.

A move has recently been made in the right direction—we mean the move on "Richmond"—which has to a great extent, created quite a revolution in the steamboat business on the Western waters. This revolution was brought about by Capt. J. S. Neal, and his brother, Capt. R. E. Neal. They are both master-mechanics and experienced boatmen, and by their energy, skill and patience, have succeeded in "introducing" upon our Western rivers the low pressure steam engines, which makes the splendid steamer, Richmond, beyond all doubt, the safest of her kind now afloat. "These engines," says a writer speaking of this boat, "combine the most essential qualities demanded—one being immense power, and the other, the requirement of but very little steam pressure upon the boilers. The pressure of steam in her boilers will never exceed forty pounds to the square inch, though she will be allowed eighty pounds by the government inspectors." In fact, the "Richmond" will rarely, if ever, have a pressure exceeding twenty pounds to the square inch in her boilers. This is less than one-sixth the pressure used on most of the high-pressure boats.

To those of our friends who travel South, we say, be certain to take the "Richmond"—for while she is moored in security and safety, be assured that she is no more so at that point, than while she is gliding through the quiet waters of the Ohio or Mississippi. The thought of an explosion, or any apprehension of such a disaster, cannot have a feather's weight on the mind of any person who will take the trouble to enquire the difference between a high and low-pressure engine.

Her capacity for freight is equal to the burthen and storage of 1,500 tons, without impairing her speed, or making her draught of water exceed 6 feet. She is clipper built, and for speed as well as safety, has no superior. For the transportation of stock, such as horses, mules, cattle, sheep, &c., she is excellently adapted.

The cabin is beautifully and tastefully decorated, and furnished in the latest style. Its extreme length is 304 feet, with a regular height of 13-1/2 feet, and has 70 state rooms, 35 of which have added to them a family room, so that a family can take their meals by themselves. The conveniences of this steamer are superior to all we have ever seen, and we can well say that with her is found what the traveler needs, safety, comfort and speed.

She Wouldn't Marry a Mechanic.

A young man began visiting a young woman, and appeared to be well pleased. One evening he called when it was quite late, which led the young woman to inquire where he had been.

"I had to work to-night."

"What! do you work for a living?" she inquired in astonishment.

"Certainly," replied the young man, "I am a mechanic."

"I dislike the name of a mechanic," and she turned up her pretty little nose.

That was the last time the young man visited the young woman. He is now a wealthy man, and has one of the best women in the country for a wife. The woman who disliked the name of a mechanic is now the wife of a miserably poor, a regular vagrant about groggshops, and the soft, verdant, silly miserable girl is obliged to take in washing in order to support herself and children.

You dislike the name of a mechanic, eh? You, whose brothers are but well dressed loafers.

We pity any girl who has so little brains, who is so verdant, so silly, as to think less of a young man for being a mechanic—one of God's noblemen—the most dignified and honorable personages of heaven's creatures. Beware young lady how you treat young men who work for a living, for you may one day be menial to one yourself. Far better discharge the well-fed pauper, with all his rings, jewelry, brazenness and pomposity, and take to your affections the callous-handed, intelligent and industrious mechanic. Thousands have bitterly regretted their folly who have turned their backs to honesty. A few years have taught them a severe lesson.

The New York correspondent of the Waterford Mail, under date of December 3d, writes:

"Admiral Togo, of the Austrian navy, is now en route for home with what he believes to be the body of the unfortunate Maximilian. My connection with the Mexican agents in this country forbids my entering into minutiae, but I can assert that the remains which will be honored by Austria are not those of the ill-fated scion of the House of Hapsburg, but of Hamero, a noted bandit and guerrilla, who, in life, was not unlike Maximilian. The latter is putting in an obscure prison in Queretaro, fed with felon's food, and awaiting the arrival of his supposed execution, Juarez, uncertain of his own success in seeking the Presidency; and perhaps the unwilling to imbue his hands in royal blood, had the noble captive conveyed by stealth to a secret den, and substituted in his stead the ruffian, Hamero, hoping, had he not succeeded in his political aspirations, to have made a fortune by delivering him to Austria."

The Cincinnati Commercial of yesterday, says:

"Many persons will be surprised to see announced the sale by Mr. L. C. Hopkins of his interest in the dry goods business. This measure is forced by heavy losses in the decline in goods under a severe competition on a sluggish market, and is preliminary to an adjustment of his affairs to meet embarrassment or failure. He has not yet been protested on his bills payable either here or elsewhere in the prosecution of an enormous business during the past fifteen years; but in view of his crippled condition, that mortifying event is inevitable, and he will be at the mercy of his creditors when his next bills mature."

The Great Medical Annual.

Hostetter's United States Almanac for 1868, for distribution, gratis, throughout the United States and all civilized countries of the Western Hemisphere, will be published about the first of January, and all who wish to understand the true philosophy of health should read and ponder the valuable suggestion it contains. In addition to an admirable medical treatise on the causes, prevention and cure of a great variety of diseases, it embraces a large amount of information interesting to the merchant, mechanic, the farmer, the planter, and professional man; and the calculations have been made for such meridians and latitudes as are most suitable for a correct and comprehensive Annual Calendar. The nature, uses, and extraordinary sanitary effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the staple tonic and alterative of more than half the Christian World, are fully set forth in its pages, which are also interspersed with valuable receipts, numerous anecdotes and other instructive and amusing reading matter, original and selected. Among the Annals to appear with the opening of the year, this will be one of the most useful, and may be had for the asking. Send for copies to the Central Manufacturing, at Pittsburgh, or to the nearest agent for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The Bitters are sold in every city, town and village of the United States.

OFFICE OF THE

LEXINGTON MALT HOUSE.

WOLF & YELLMAN, Proprs.

LEXINGTON, KY., Nov. 30, 1867.

HAVING determined to give our attention to the BREWING business, we have this day discontinued the manufacture of Malt Liquors, and leased our brewery for a term of years to Messrs. Walker & Co., whom we can commend to our customers and the public in general as fully competent and worthy to merit a continuance of the liberal patronage heretofore extended to us, and for which, in retiring from the brewing business, we tender to our friends and customers our grateful acknowledgments.

Having but lately erected an extensive Malt House, complete in all its appointments, and having located in the heart of one of the best barley growing regions in the country, we possess facilities for conducting the Malt business unsurpassed by any similar establishment in the West, and we are prepared to furnish distillers and brewers yeast, and other qualities of malt below Cincinnati or Louisville prices. Parties desiring barley or rye malted, can be accommodated on reasonable terms. New York and Wisconsin Hops constantly on hand and for sale.

Distillers and brewers are respectfully invited to examine our stock of Malt and Hops before ordering from abroad.

The Rankin House has been renovated and refitted since the fire.

Mat. Turney, Esq., is a lucky man. He drew a splendid painting at a sort of lottery game, the other day at the Bourbon House in Paris.

We were informed last Monday, that T. J. Megibben, of this county, had sold to a New York house, sixty thousand gallons of whisky for 51 thousand dollars, they paying the government tax.

Mr. C. G. Land is disposing of his dry goods at greatly reduced prices. In fact he will sell his calicoes and ladies dress patterns to suit purchasers. His gents' furnishing goods he offers very low. dec26

Miss Kate Stoner and Mr. James Butler, of Bourbon county, passed down the railroad a week ago last Monday for Cincinnati, where the two were made "one flesh." Miss Kate is the daughter of Washington Stoner. We hope they may live long and happily.

The Peak Family will amuse the people at Cynthiana on Thursday night, at the Court-house, after the lecture of Admiral Semmes. This is the most famous family of Swiss Bell Ringers in the world, and the music they make is beautiful. No one who loves music should fail to go.

The True Kentuckian says: A difficulty occurred at Shawhan's Station on Monday last, between George Kellar, son of Sol. Kellar, dec'd, and Jas. Dimmitt, of Russell's Mills, in which Dimmitt was shot, the ball striking a rib on the left side, and ranging round toward the back. The wound though severe, it is thought, is not dangerous. We understand that it was a clear case of self defense.

We learn that a Mr. Jack Divini attempted suicide at the Cynthiana House last Sunday night, by taking laudanum. Dr. Beale was called for in time to save him. Jack is a good mechanic and is worth something to mankind and himself too, and we think should not become discouraged with life at his age. The world and its affairs presents rather a dreary appearance just now, but spring will come very soon, when business will be lively and the world will brighten up.

The following marriage licenses have been issued by our worthy county clerk, P. Wherrett, for the month of December:

S. M. Humphreys to A. Boone,
W. C. Platt to Nannie Nichols,
G. W. Mullens to S. E. Daniel,
B. J. Bailey to Lucinda Jolley,
Jephtha Cloe to Lucinda Elliott,
Solomon Whalen to P. Langley,
G. W. Doan to M. J. Clayton,
A. Florence to P. A. Cook,
S. Brown to M. A. McKinley,
W. Fryman to C. Harrington,
T. Angel to M. J. Smith.

Rain has been falling the past week in extraordinary amounts, really more than seemed necessary, as we had understood that the rivers were up high enough for boats to pass down loaded with coal. South Licking River is booming and we expect another small Noah's flood. Steamboats could now run up to Cynthiana from Cincinnati, were the bridges out of the way. Many years ago it was believed that Cynthiana would be the head of navigation on South Licking, provided the Legislature would lock and dam the stream, and lots along its banks were held at fabulous prices. We hope that no such ideas will creep into the heads of our people now because we hardly think it would pay to make the improvements. Rain and mud will put our people to thinking about turnpikes again, in certain districts. We shall talk about the Claysville pike again this summer.

Admiral Semmes will give another one of his interesting lectures at the Christian Church to-night.

On Wednesday last a fight occurred at a dance near Paris, Edgar county, Illinois, between Vandever Perry and Ben. Devers. Preston Cash in stepping in between them to stop the fight, was stabbed seven times with a bowie-knife in Perry's hands and died that night. The murderer escaped.—Cin. Com.

The above extract is a telegram to the Commercial, and is not correct. It seems from the following letter to Mrs. Devers, of this place, that Ben. Devers had nothing to do with the murder, as he left the dance before the war had fairly begun. Ben. Devers is a quiet peaceful man, and we hardly believe that he has any murder in his heart:

Conlogue, Ill., Jan. 1, 1868.
Mrs. Devers:—Ben was not in the trouble, and is not concerned in it. He was there, and they commenced quarrelling with him, but he got up and left before the trouble.

Yours, &c.,
H. O. SNYDER.

The good people of Paris, have had, during the holidays, quite an excitement at the Catholic Fair. Among other things which created quite a stir was the struggle for a cane, "or who was the most popular man." The candidates for honor, were Messrs. J. Hickey, T. Green, M. Murray and F. L. McChesney. It seems that a quarrel of a dollar secured a vote, and the man who had the most money or whose friends had the most was by far the most popular man. Mr. Murray had the largest purse or the most friends, we know not which, and as a matter of course carried off the cane. Mr. McChesney was second best, and will, we understand, receive from his friends a cane valued at fifty dollars. So we go.

We are authorized to announce A. PERRIN, Esq., as a candidate for Circuit Clerk, of Harrison, subject to the decision of the Democratic Convention. Jan26

We are authorized to announce Dr. A. J. BEALE, as a candidate for circuit court clerk, for the county of Harrison, subject to the Democratic convention. Jan26

KENTUCKY STATE LOTTERY!

The only Legalized Drawing of the kind in the United States.

Grand Holiday Drawing!

To be drawn at COVINGTON, Ky.

CLASS Y, December 31, 1867.

No more acceptable and appropriate present can be made to a mother, wife, daughter, husband, or father, than a ticket in the Kentucky State Lottery. It has long been acknowledged that it offers greater inducements to the purchasers of tickets than any other legalized lottery in the world. The December scheme surpasses, in grandeur, anything of the kind ever presented to the public; it distributes $200,000. The capital prize is $50,000; insuring a handsome fortune to the lucky holder of the corresponding ticket. Hundreds of well attested instances, similar to the following, are almost daily occurring: "Miss Mary Russell Mitchell, who died in 1855, when only ten years old; gained, as a prize in a lottery, the handsome sum of ten thousand pounds, or fifty thousand dollars. The ticket which drew the magnificent sum, was presented to her by her father, one of the most prominent men and judges of the time." How many homes would be brightened by a similar success in the grand holiday drawing of the Kentucky State Lottery, on December 31st, 1867.

LIST OF PRIZES.

1 prize of $50,000	9 prizes of $300
1 prize of 20,000	9 prizes of 250
1 prize of 8,000	157 prizes of 150
1 prize of 7,000	3 prizes of 125
1 prize of 5,000	229 prizes of 100
29 prizes of 1,000	18 prizes of 50
63 prizes of 400	321 prizes of 25

Prizes amounting to $230,050.

32,000 Numbers and 788 Prizes.

Tickets $12, Halves 6, Quarters $4

PLAN OF THE LOTTERY.

The numbers from 1 to 32,000 printed on separate slips of paper, are enclosed with small tin tubes, and placed in one wheel. The prizes of which there are 788, varying in value, from $50,000 to $50, are similarly printed on separate slips, enclosed and placed in another wheel. The wheels are then revolved, and a number is drawn from the wheel of numbers, and at the same time a prize is drawn from the other wheel. The number and prize drawn out are opened and exhibited to the audience, and registered. The prize being placed against the number drawn. This operation is repeated until all the prizes are drawn out.

The above magnificent scheme will be drawn in public in Covington, Ky., on the 1st day of December, 1867, being the great holiday drawing of the year.

The above magnificent single number Lottery will be drawn in public, in Covington, Ky., by sworn Commissioners, at one o'clock, p. m., at the corner of 4th and Scott streets. The Kentucky State Lotteries are no gift Enterprises, but responsible money lotteries, that have been conducted for the past thirty years, and are drawn under the authority of a charter from the State, and bonds are given for the payment of all prizes.

The official list of numbers drawing prizes will be published in the N. Y. Herald, Chicago papers, Cincinnati Daily Commercial and Cincinnati German papers. Address all orders for tickets to MURRAY, EDDY & CO., Covington, Ky.
